<sup>a</sup>New Mexico repealed the death penalty for offenses committed after July 1, 2009. Connecticut repealed the death penalty for offenses committed after April 25, 2012. Maryland repealed the death penalty effective October 1, 2013. As of December 31, 2014, 2 men in New Mexico, 11 men in Connecticut, and 4 men in Maryland were under previously imposed death sentences.

<sup>b</sup>In 2015, the governor of Maryland commuted the death sentences of the remaining four inmates under sentence of death. The Nebraska legislature passed a bill to repeal the death penalty, but an appeal successfully stayed enactment until the state could hold a referendum on the issue. As of December 31, 2015, 2 men in New Mexico, 11 men in Connecticut, and 10 men in Nebraska were under previously imposed death sentences.

Advance count of executions in 2016

From January 1, 2016, to December 31, 2016, five states executed 20 inmates, which was eight fewer inmates than the number executed in 2015. This was the smallest number of executions since 1991 when 14 inmates were executed.

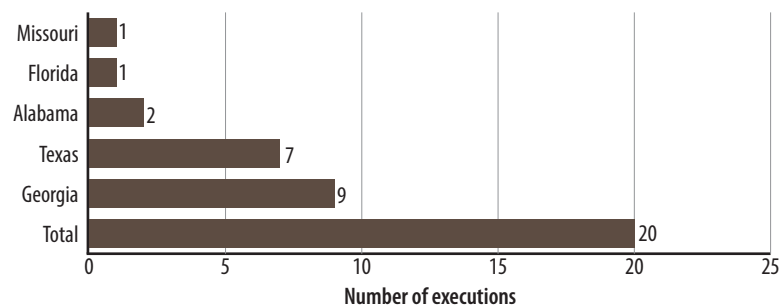

Two states accounted for 80% of the executions during this period: Georgia executed nine inmates, and Texas executed seven.

All executions in 2016 were by lethal injection.

No women were executed during this period.

Methodology

Capital punishment information is collected annually as part of the National Prisoner Statistics program (NPS-8). This data series is collected in two parts: (1) data on persons under sentence of death are obtained from the department of corrections in each jurisdiction currently authorizing capital punishment, and (2) the status of death penalty statutes is obtained from the Office of the Attorney General in each of the 50 states, the U.S. Attorney's Office in the District of Columbia, and the Federal Bureau of Prisons for the federal government. Data collection forms are available at www.bjs.gov.

NPS-8 covers all persons under sentence of death at any time during the year who were held in a state or federal nonmilitary correctional facility. This includes capital offenders transferred from prison to mental hospitals and those who may have escaped from custody. It excludes persons whose death sentences have been overturned by the court, regardless of their current incarceration status.

The data in this report may differ from data collected by other organizations for several reasons:

- NPS-8 adds inmates to the population under sentence of death not at sentencing but at the time they are admitted to a state or federal correctional facility.
- If inmates entered prison under a death sentence or were reported as being relieved of a death sentence in one year but the court had acted in the previous year, the counts are adjusted to reflect the dates of court decisions.
- NPS counts are always for the last day of the calendar year and will differ from counts for more recent periods.

The Bureau of Justice Statistics of the U.S. Department of Justice is the principal federal agency responsible for measuring crime, criminal victimization, criminal offenders, victims of crime, correlates of crime, and the operation of criminal and civil justice systems at the federal, state, tribal, and local levels. BJS collects, analyzes, and disseminates reliable and valid statistics on crime and justice systems in the United States, supports improvements to state and local criminal justice information systems, and participates with national and international organizations to develop and recommend national standards for justice statistics. Jeri M. Mulrow is acting director.
